With the increased globalization of automotive production, understanding and managing the impact of working conditions on business has become a greater challenge. Developing responsible working conditions begins with a shared understanding of the key issues up and down the supply chain.

The initiative develops a common approach to ensure and improve working conditions in emerging markets. It reduces complexity, redundancy, and cost to implementing working conditions programs and helps companies maintain their reputations as good corporate citizens by joining the efforts of other leading companies that take a proactive approach to the issue.
